Key Assumptions

Revenue development:

- Online sales grow considerably, making up 45% of the revenue in 2024
- The in-store revenue increases due to new stores all around the world
- Overall growth based on expansion in Asia & EU and exploitation of US market with experiential stores

EBIT-margin:

- Slow improvement due to reduction in COGS as a result of better economies of scale
- Minimal improvement of SG&A since the expansion into new market causes additional costs, compensating the low cost of the online segment

Key Inputs

WACC (5.8%):

- Cost of Debt: 2.4%
- Cost of Equity: 6.4%
- Financing structure: 70% equity
- Terminal growth rate: 2.9%

Capex:

 In 2020 the company reduces capex to limit the impact of the COVID-19 crisis on its margins; in the long-term, capex will grow due to its storebased expansion strategy

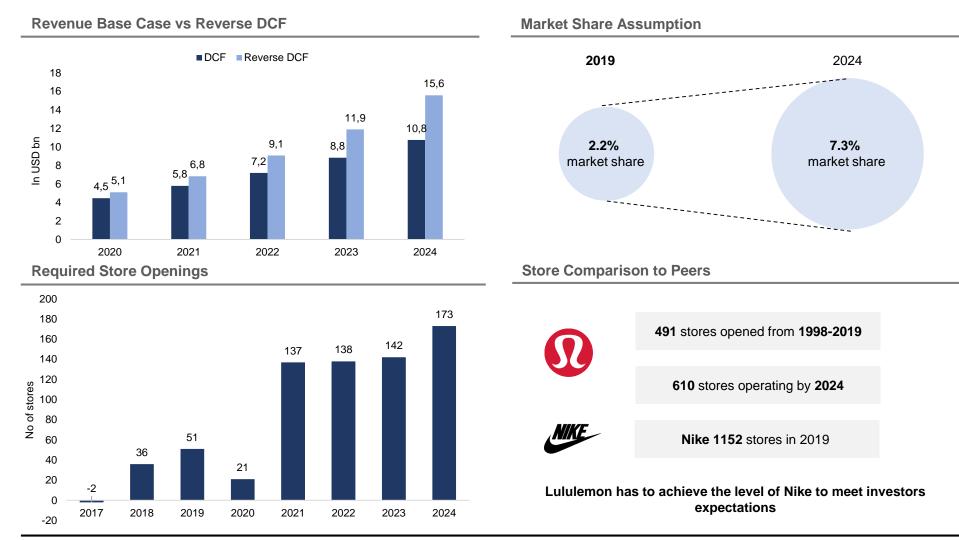

Net Cash:

 Lululemon has large cash reserves, (>1 bn FY 2019) and will manage to maintain them in the future

Reverse DCF

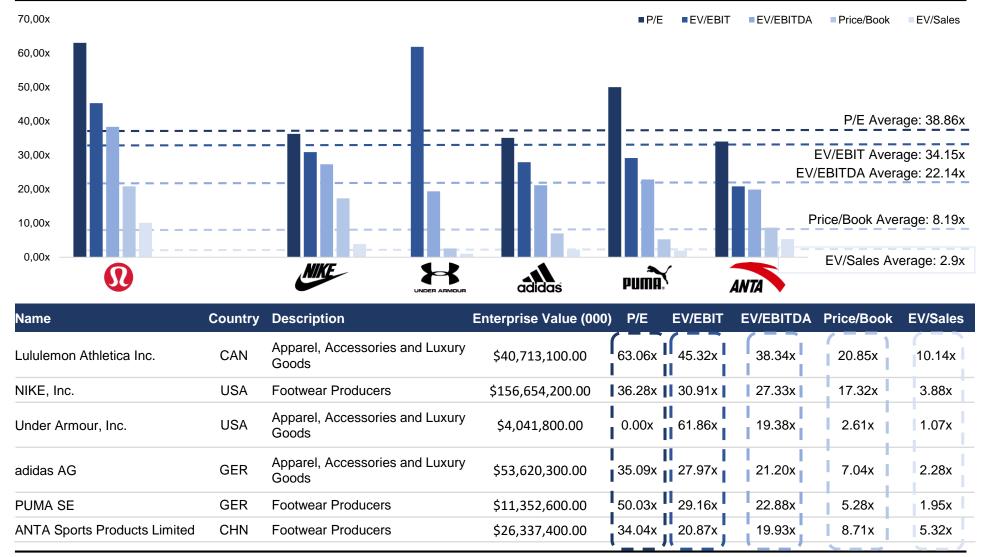

The company needs to open 610 stores to be in line with investors' expectations

Multiple Ratios

Lululemon's multiple ratios are substantially higher than those of its peers

CCA

The CCA concluded a significantly lower share price than the status quo

Key assuntions about COVID-19

- The in-store revenue strongly impacted in Q1 due to lock-down;
- Tthe online sale make up for the loss: with an +200% in April; we foreseen that the trend will continue through out the year due to a change in the customers habits.
- During the corona lockdown, many people start practicing sport at home, boosting the sport wear industry. Lululemon is among the company which perform better in this segment according to the available data.
- Q1 usually makes up just the 20% of the total revenue. 35% of the lululemon products are usually sold in Q4. Therefore, the company has still time to recover the in-store revenue lost due to COVID-19;
- The company has a flexible costs structure, therefore, the margins won't be considerably impacted (COGS +0,2%; SG&A +0,5%)

Profitability margins increased but a slow pace
